Wembley...

It has already been announced that we have another Wembley game next year. This will be on October 25th 5pm kick-off. The Tampa Bay Buccaneers are giving up their home game to host the New England Patriots. Hopefully, we will have as good a game as we did this year. Tickets I have heard go on sale in JANUARY. You need to go to www.nfluk.com to express an interest

Taken from NFLUK website:

The New England Patriots are the most popular team among NFLUK.com registered members, and have won three Super Bowls this decade. The two Wembley-bound teams combined have played in five of the last seven Super Bowls, with the Patriots winning following the 2001, 2003 and 2004 seasons and the Buccaneers triumphing in 2002. In 2007 the New England Patriots made it through the entire regular season undefeated, only to lose in a thrilling finish to Super Bowl XLII in February 2008.

Filling in the register of interest form will give you the best chance to purchase general admission tickets for the game. We will endeavour to fulfill your ticketing request although this will be dependent on demand and we cannot guarantee that your request will be fully met.

Thanksgiving Day

We were televised for the Dallas game on Thanksgiving, and Chip and I watched it while also being in the chat room with other Seahawk fans. After being totally outclassed by the Cowboys, we were asked in the chat room if we could take any positives from the game?

Reply from robseattle: the green gloves worn by Seattle looked cute.

There isn't any way of salvaging our season except to play our socks off and not give up. We gave the Patriots a run for their money this week, and considering we had a few back-up players due to injuries etc. then we can only hope that next year will be a lot better.

Being a fan of any team whatever the sport means that you have your good seasons and your not so good seasons. True fans stick with their team whatever and can only hope for better to come. Next season for us will see a new head coach and maybe a new hope for getting back to winning ways.

Happy Holidays

Can you believe it's that time of year again! From everyone on the seahawkers committee, we would like to wish you all a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year (if this is possible with the 'credit crunch') or as they say in the US Happy Holidays.

Love Pops
